Altai Enables AGVs at World Robot Conference

The World Robot Conference 2019 was held in Beijing, China from 20 to 25 August. The event is an international conference for global robotic industry. The event gathers experts and enterprises from scientific and technological industries around the world, including some of Altai's customers. This year, the conference has attracted over 800 thousand of visitors to attend the show. One of Altai's customers, Geek+, has participated as an exhibitor to display their AGV solutions. While showcasing their products, Geek+'s AGVs are powered by Altai's CPE and connected by A3-Ei dual-band access point, which is very suitable for use in harsh environment such as warehouses and municipality coverage. A3-Ei provides a reliable support to Geek+'s AGV system during the event and has ensured the AGV's performance would not be affected by connectivity issues.

Altai's Connects Réunion with New Products

Altai has recently deployed a number of projects on Réunion Island, which is an overseas region of France locating in the Indian Ocean. Following the global trend, the island's government is now deploying more and more modern communication facilities in the local area. In these projects, Altai's new products, AX500, CX200 and IX500, have been deployed in Island's public area such as clinics and resorts to enable wireless connection. Similar to other Altai's products, these new members of Altai's portfolio, compliant to 802.11ac wave 2, are suitable for crowded and complicated environment. Even though the venue is filled with people and interference, their signal strength remains strong and stable. Altai's products have therefore surprised its Reunion customers in terms of performance and cost-effectiveness. More deployments will happen in the near future.

Partner Training in Malaysia

Altai's distributor in Malaysia, Aglotel, has just conducted a partner training for the local resellers and customers. As a specialist in telecommunications and wireless broadband solution, Aglotel is a long-time partner of Altai and has been taking care of Altai's business in Malaysia.

In the training, Aglotel walked through Altai's product portfolio and highlighted the new products as well as the market segments to be focused in the near future.

After the briefing session, Aglotel had trained the attendees for Altai Super WiFi solution with hands-on session. All of the resellers and customers think the training program is useful and beneficial.
