Altai Super WiFi Sparkles at Modern Manufacturing Expo in Sydney

The Modern Manufacturing Expo was successfully held on 20 & 21 September in Sydney

Showground, Australia this year. The event gathered over 50 leading companies in advanced manufacturing processes, products and technologies to help transition traditional manufacturers into modern manufacturers. As a leading Wi-Fi infrastructure provider for industrial application, Altai Super WiFi was introduced to the event participants by its partner in Australia, Ausmeter, to showcase its smart antenna technology and outstanding RF performance in typical industrial deployment scenarios of large coverage area and demanding yet harsh environment. Altai's products were well received by the visitors and it is expected that the event will bring more business opportunities in Australian market.

Nurturing Future HealthCare Workers in Chad with Altai Super WiFi

Altai is again helping an education institute to deploy an ubiquitous wireless network. This time Super WiFi has been brought to the campus of Human Health Sciences at the University of N'Djamena, a leading higher education institution in Chad. The faculty offers training in Surgery, Gyneco-obstetrics, Pediatrics, Medicine, Biomedical Sciences/Pharmacy and Public Health to students to be HealthCare workers. There are currently 1042 students and 80 teachers with the faculty at the moment. To ensure all of them to be able to connect to the best Wi-Fi network, Altai's A3-Ei and C1n are being tested in the campus' outdoor and indoor areas respectively, with support of AltaiCare as management platform. The team of Altai is equally excited as the students and staff of the faculty about the Wi-Fi network to be ready!
